

Managing Growth® Seminar – Spring 2010

CONSTRUCTION CONTRACT LAW

COURSE DESCRIPTION: Construction is a complex and constantly changing endeavor that can often be described as a "problem in progress." What separates the successful from the unsuccessful is the ability to timely and effectively deal with construction law problems. In this seminar, we will discuss some legal issues relating to construction projects that affect small businesses -- fundamentals of construction contracts, contract disputes, late payment/collections, construction lien law, etc.

INSTRUCTOR: Henry Chan - Wilson & Chan's construction practice represents all players in the construction industry, including governmental agencies, construction managers, construction inspectors, engineers, land surveyors, contractors, subcontractors, etc. As such, our active involvement in the construction industry keeps us current on industry trends. We find the right solutions that result in an imaginative blend of corporate and government regulation considerations.
